In this Noisy, Dynamic Market,
How Does Your Brand and Message Break Through?

The key to influencing buying decisions is to guide and inform their journey:

- use intelligence to understand based on human dimension of change and activate based on behaviors, affinities and intent.
- make meaningful connections with targeted messaging and experiences.
- activate across channels and sources buyers rely on.
- measure and optimize performance and results.

For organizations, influence is currency in today's world.

How do you influence someone to...

Change Their Behavior?

What I have been doing no longer works, but change is too hard:
Demonstrate a new, better path forward.

Change What They Buy?

I'm evaluating my options:
Demonstrate why your solution is the best one to meet their needs.

Embrace Something New?

I don't need to change:
Show them the problem they don't know they have – and how to solve it.

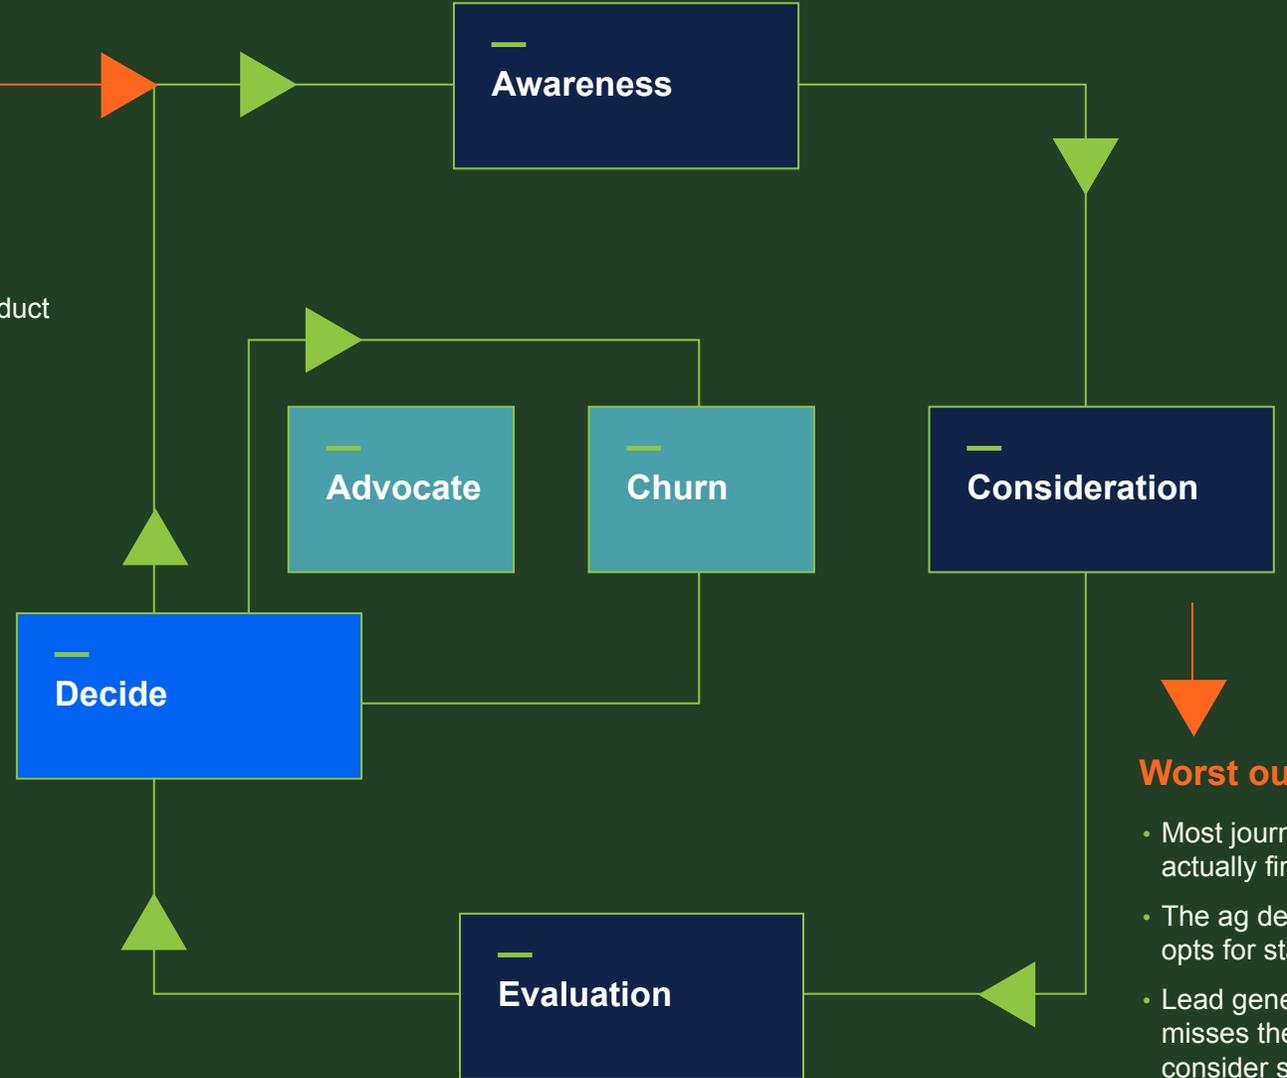

Mapping Your Marketing to the Decision Journey

First-time buyer triggers

- Conversation with neighboring farmer
- Trusted advisor recommendation
- Read about new product in magazine
- Weather change
- Markets change
- Operation change

Flywheel Effect

- Meet your customers where they are in their journey
- Support the research process
- Accelerate sales process: a more confident decision-maker makes decisions faster

Worst outcome

- Most journeys don't actually finish
- The ag decision-maker opts for status quo
- Lead generation misses the consider stage

Intelligent Strategies, Solutions, and Expertise that Break Through the Noise

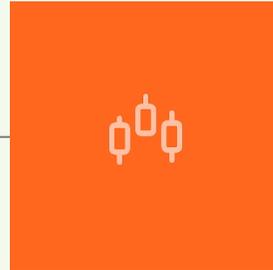

Let's talk about digital.

Understand, connect, and meet your decision-maker on their terms.

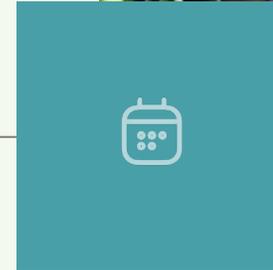

Attention:

Use Omnichannel activation and optimization to be where decision-makers spend their time.

Personalization:

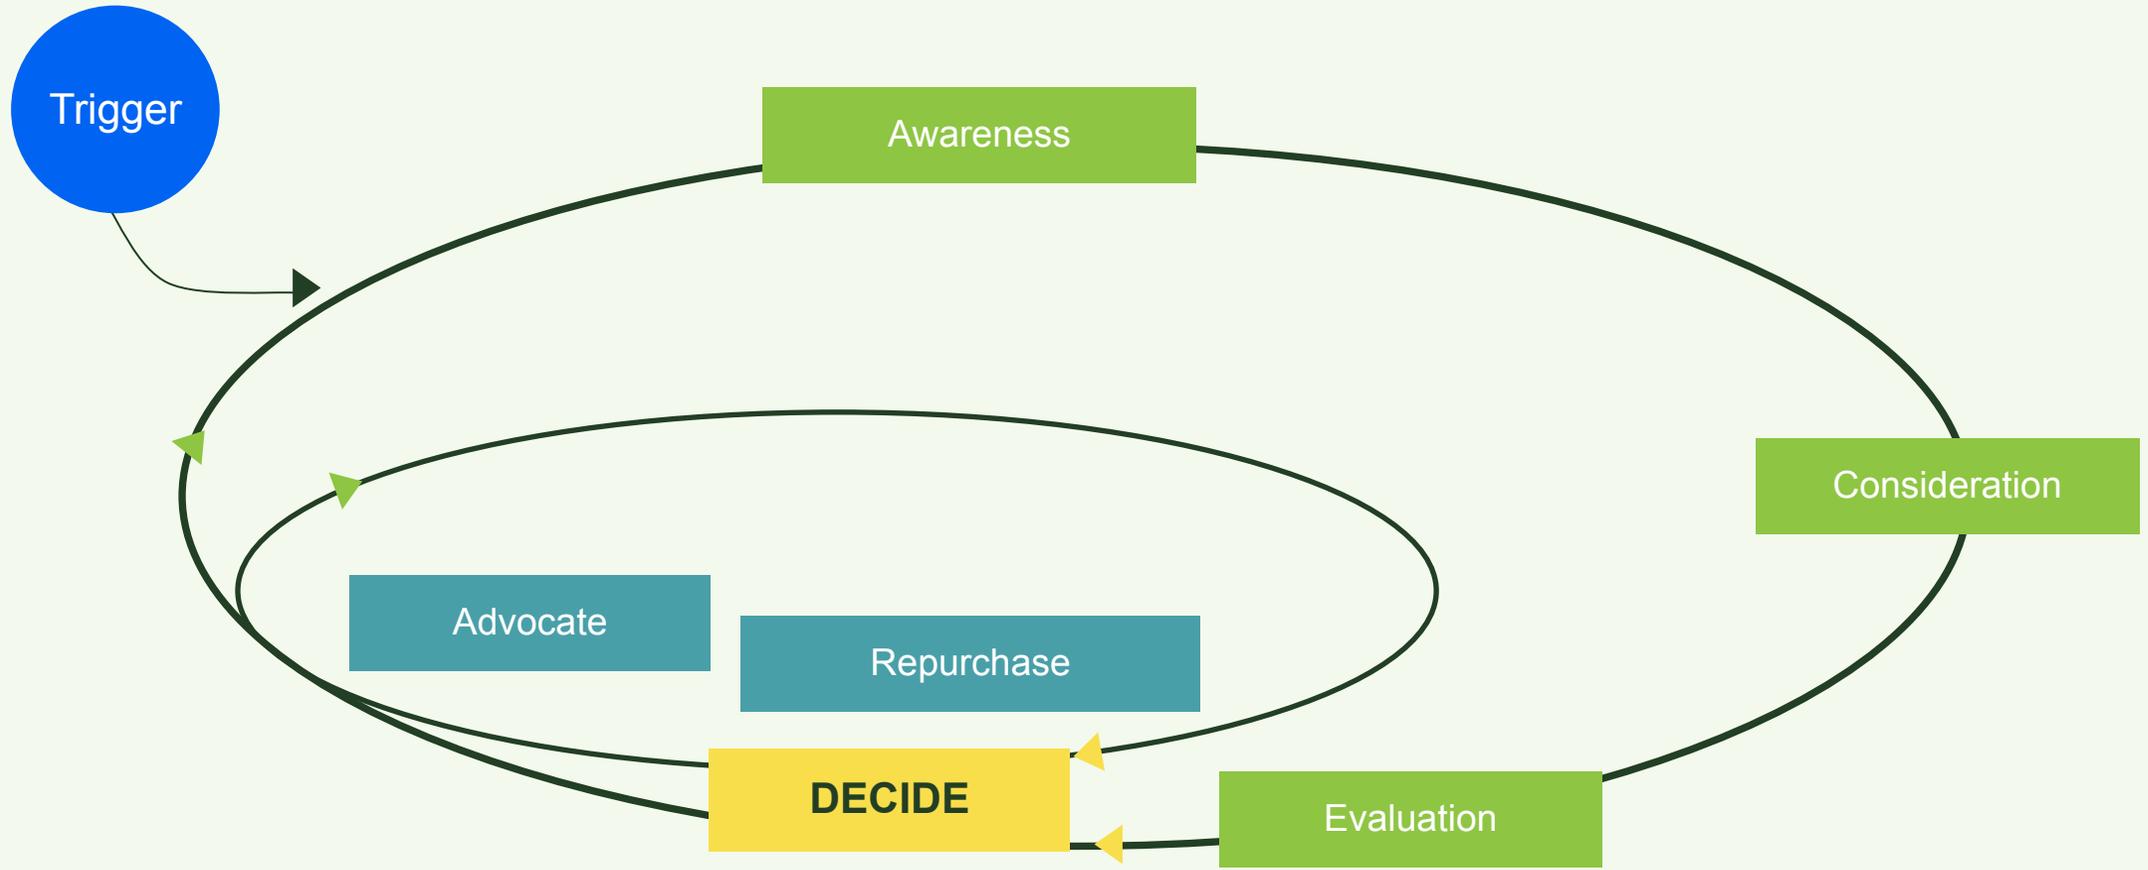

Target content and messaging to intent by using behavioral affinities for decision journey support.

Frequency:

Use AI and data to identify high value targets and programmatic measurement to drive increased intent.

...And turning decision-journeys into flywheels, not funnels.

The digital habits of the ag decision-maker have accelerated dramatically.

John Phipps describes his Starlink satellite Internet service as a “quantum leap forward” and “worth the 20 month wait.” He added, “We have experienced no buffering delays. We can download video in minutes, not hours. Even graphic-heavy web pages open quickly.”

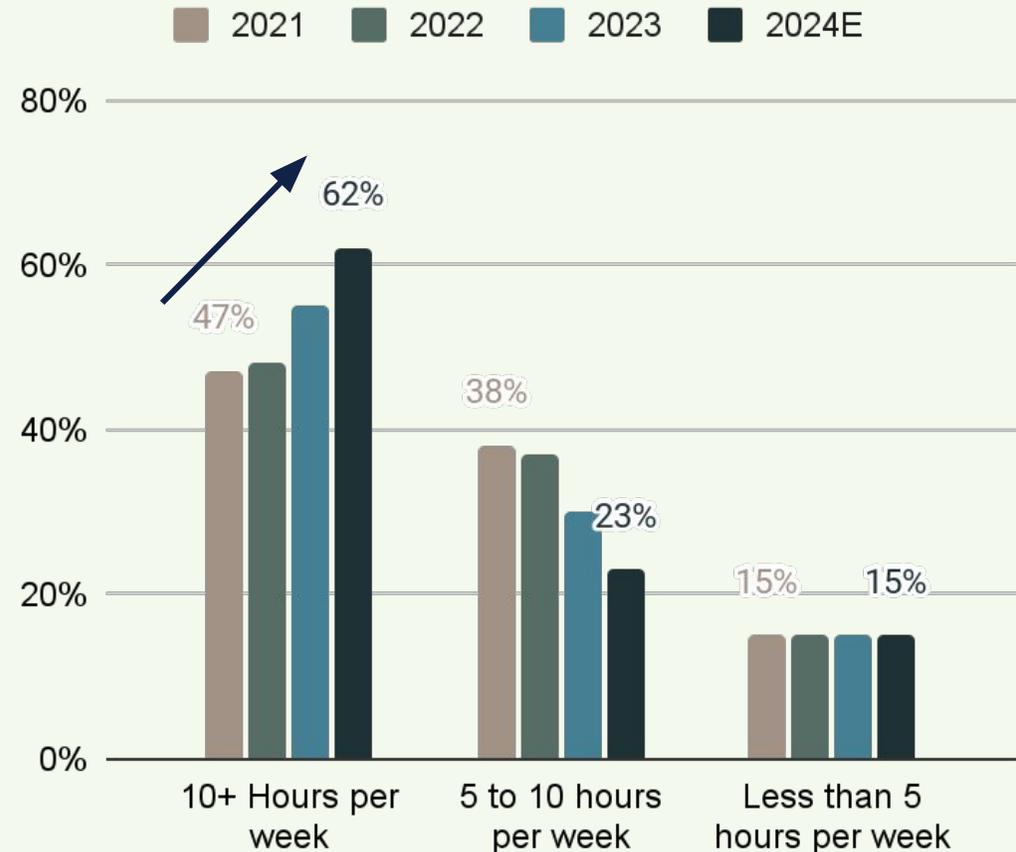

Ag decision-makers are spending 60% more time using the Internet vs. 2021

Ag decision-makers use the Internet for work. 70% of ag owner / operators say use the Internet daily to find ag-specific information for their business and operations.

Top info that Ag pros are looking for, include:

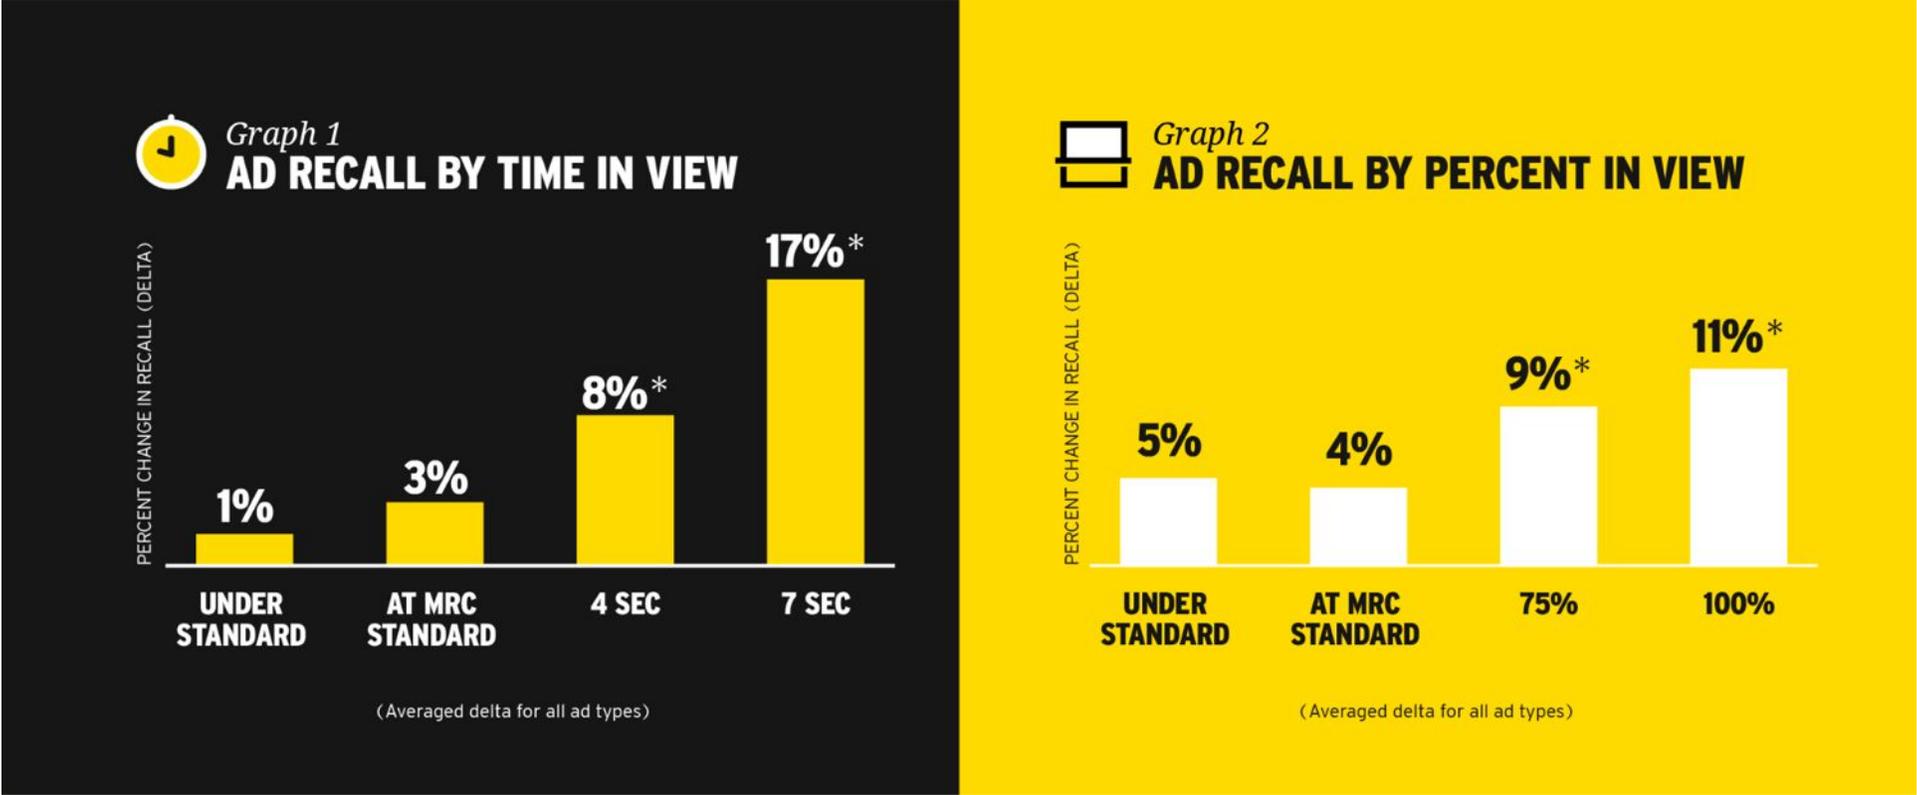

- solutions to specific needs and problems
- grasping what other farmers are doing
- researching new technologies/practices
- gaining commodity market insights to max profits

Internet Usage Intensifying

But not all digital impressions receive the same amount of attention, and viewability is NOT an effective KPI.

Measuring Clicks Doesn't Move the Needle

Influencing the full decision-journey wins business, grows market share and increases LTV

First-time buyer triggers

- Conversation with neighboring farmer
- Trusted advisor recommendation
- Read about new product in magazine
- Weather change
- Markets change
- Operation change

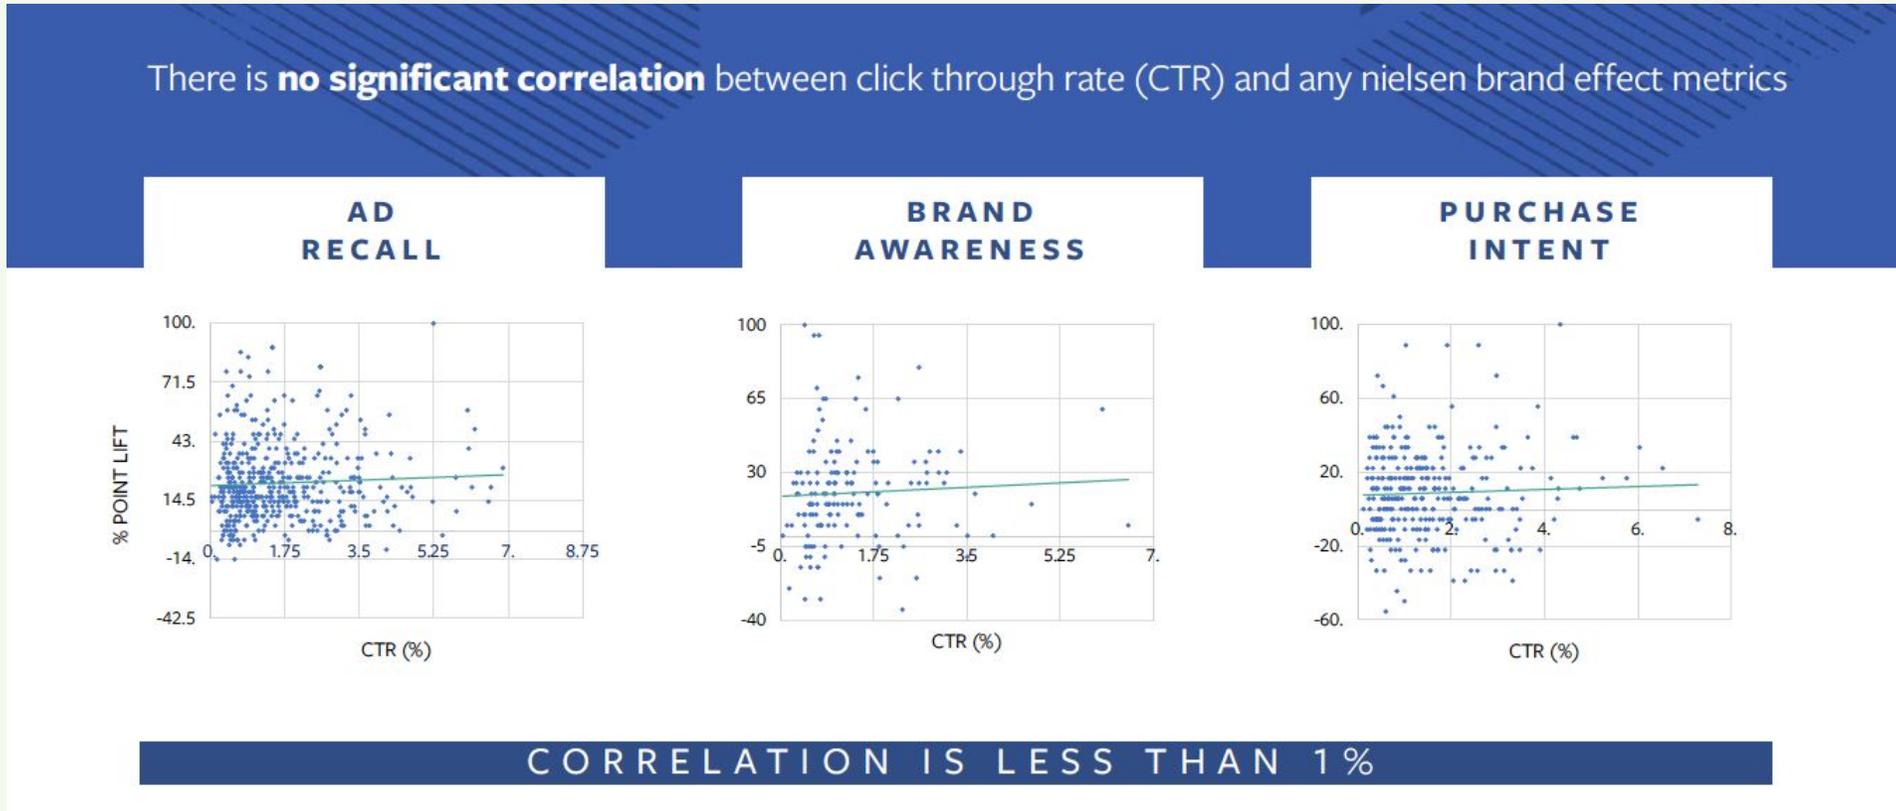

FLYWHEEL EFFECT

- Identify loyal producers with high social capital
- Create and promote testimonials
- Align incentives with marketing

Worst outcome

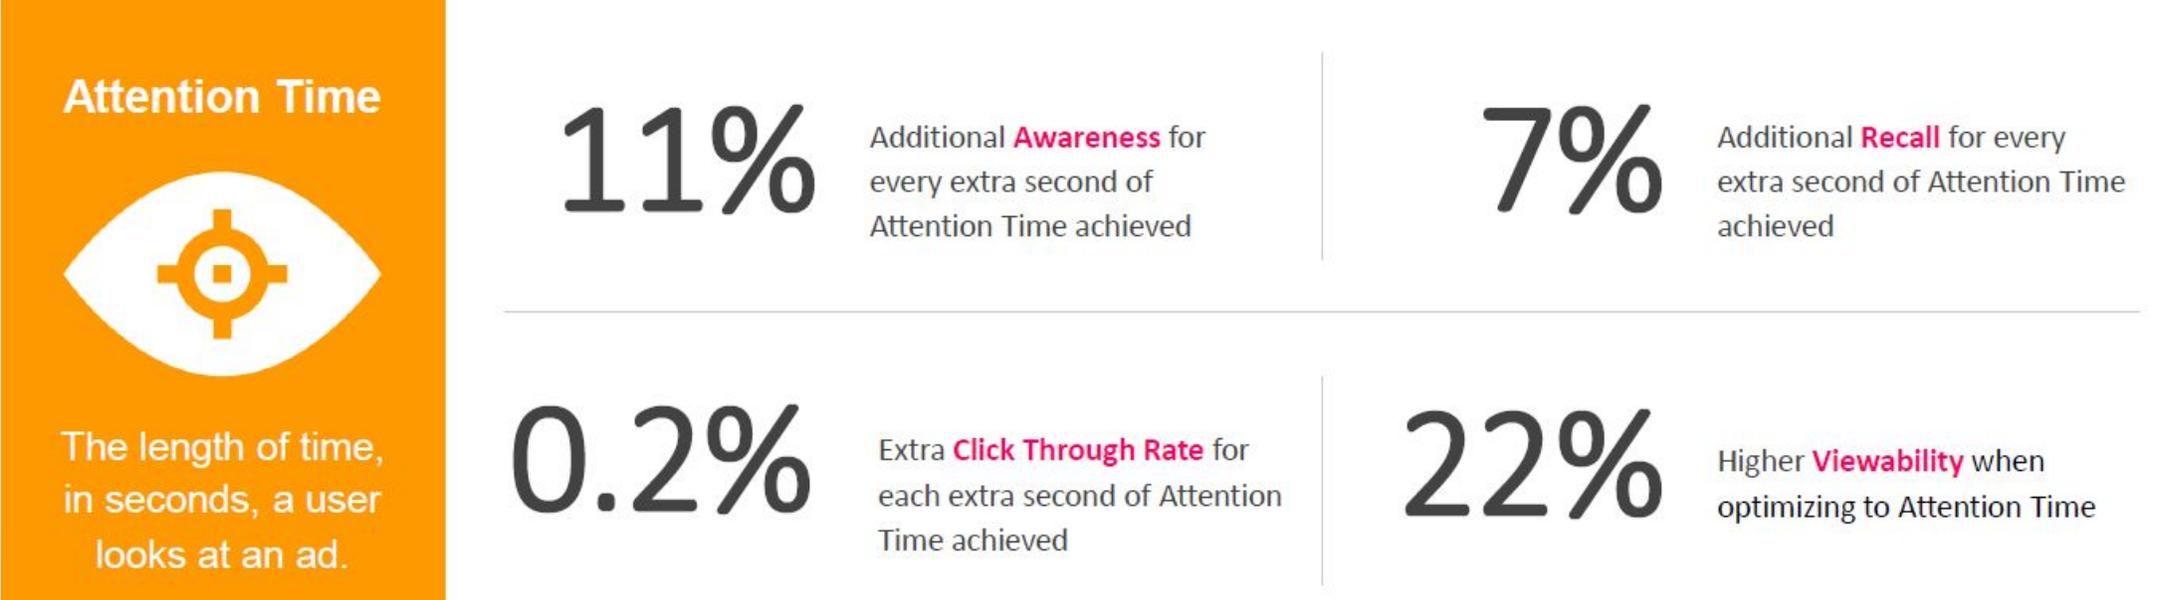

- Most journeys don't actually finish
- The ag decision-maker opts for status quo
- Lead generation misses the consider stage

Click through rate (CTR) doesn't correlate to market share growth either... this is not a DTC market!

Increased use of of digital consumption creates data for intent-driven contextualization and personalization Companies that grew market share more than 10% used highly personalized marketing techniques and tactics 1.5x more than those that grew less than 10%.

The decision journey is real, and it's changing the way ag owner-operators make decisions and transact.

"I used to say co-ops were dinosaurs, but I found the one that isn't," said Lance Peterson.

"I saw Lance buying inputs via our portal," says K.C. Graner, CFS senior vice president (pictured on right). "I called him and asked for an hour of his time." "That conversation was a springboard. It completely discredited some assumptions I had about transactional [digital] customers," Graner says. "If we don't engage well digitally, we're just another white pickup."

The decision journey spans both the physical and digital worlds, often starting and ending offline

For most, the journey starts in the physical world, migrates digitally as their interest deepens, and then goes back to their trusted advisor.

Print for awareness, ag industry websites and affinities for consideration, and local dealers for decision stages.

TIP: Run campaigns to both the buyer and the sales channel to avoid the “last mile problem” and influence the trusted advisors.

Meet farmers wherever they are on their decision-making journey

Awareness

I know I have a problem:
Cut through the noise by maximizing frequency

- Find YOUR custom audience vs a generic segment
(Ideal Customer Segments) because farmers don't fit into boxes
- Understand their specific core drivers and objections
(HD Profile) because farm decisions are human decisions
- Program against tactics that deliver cost-effective frequency because repetition wins
 - Programmatic, broadcast, print, display advertising

Consideration

I'm evaluating my options: Maximize positive engagement with your solution

- Segment your audience by the type of decision support they need (Readiness Index) and track their change in readiness over time
- Provide timely, relevant information and decision support (Ag cal/content hub) reflect their reality
- Follow them to where they are looking for information... to ensure you're in the consideration set
 - Social media, native ads, triggered emails, interactive matchmaking, CCTV/ content studio, retargeting

Decision

I'm choosing the best fit:
Dial in your Unique Selling Proposition for your audience

- Deeply understand triggers and pain points
(HD trigger analysis) so you can zero in on the USP that matters most
- Align messages with social proof and highly targeted content (HD influencer analysis, content hub) let others make the case
- Influence trusted advisors motivate sales channel to recommend your product
- Answer their remaining questions... connect them to a real person who has been there before
 - Email marketing, Text marketing, branded search, live webinars and events, reviews and ratings, nurture ads

Retain and Advocate

I want to share my experience:
Turn buyers into your best evangelists

- Identify those producers who like you and have the highest social capital (Sentiment tracking, HD influencer assessment) focus on those that others respect
- Create testimonials and experiences
(Content studio, field days, PRO style matchmaking programs) influencer marketing on steroids
- Distribute this priceless content far and wide:
 - CCTV, podcasts, content marketing

Ideal Customer Profiling and geo-targeting is the norm for awareness.

Leverage Farm Journal affinity data to target consideration and evaluation journey stages.
